

IMAM MANSOUR MAHMOUD SAAD

Imam Mansour Mahmoud Saad is originally from Egypt. He grew up there and memorized the Holy Qur'an in his early years. He joined Al-Azhar Institute, well-renowned as the most prestigious Institute for teaching the Islamic Studies, when he was five. When he was 20, he started preaching in different mosques.

In 2005 and upon completing his Bachelor degree in Islamic Da'wa (Preaching) from Al-Azhar University, Imam Mansour Saad was appointed as Imam, Teacher and Preacher in the Egyptian Ministry of Endowment where he led different mosques and communities for ten years.

He has been teaching variety subjects of Islamic studies focusing on the Islamic theology and four schools of Islamic Jurisprudence.

Imam Mansour has been teaching Arabic for non-Arabic speakers and has participated in preparing a modern curriculum to teach Arabic for non-Arabic speakers. He also obtained his certificate as an Arabic instructor for non-Arabic speakers.

In 2005 Imam Mansour earned a certificate from Saleh Kamel Center for Islamic Economics (SKCIE), Cairo, Egypt where he studied an intensive English course which covered the major Western misunderstanding about Islam and how to create a healthy and wide-ranging atmosphere of tolerance and acceptance of the other as one is - and not as one "should be" - through intercultural dialogue.

In 2006 Imam Mansour pursued his Preliminary Master where he specialized in Theology and Comparative Religions. Then in 2018, he got his Master degree in New Religious Movements focusing on Scientology Religious Movement in the US which qualified him later on to be active in interfaith dialogue programs.

Then for four years at the American University in Cairo, he attended an English intensive course for religious purposes to bridge the cultural gap between Eastern and Western cultural.

In 2014 he was nominated to visit the US for interfaith dialogue program where he met religious leaders in many US states to build bridges with other faiths and he gave lectures in variety of events in mosques, churches, and synagogues beside different schools and universities.

In September 2021, Imam Mansour moved to US to work as the Imam of the Islamic Centre of Little Rock, Arkansas. Besides leading the Muslim community in Little Rock, He has been doing various da'wa activities. Imam Mansour is married and is blessed with three children, two girls and one boy.
